On the Cover

In 2016, Mt. Cuba Center in Hockessin, Delaware, donated several R. austrinum to Jenkins Arboretum & Gardens in Devon, Pennsylvania, at the conclusion of a research study. These were added to the gardens at Jenkins and evaluated. The plant that was later named Tomato Soup was among those plants and was named by Steve Wright, Jenkins' Director of Horticulture, for its dark orange, nearly red flowers that resemble Campbell's tomato soup.
